Subject: Women .. between the minds and challenges difficult ..?!

Per pause: Article to Lisa Nichols >>>>>>>

There is no doubt that talking about women will lead us to different worlds, places and times. In each of them there is a difference and a discrepancy, because the index of movement and freedom is mainly related to the traditions and customs of the society in which it lives. For example, the flirt, the beloved or the mistress, and in rare cases, courageous heroine or money and fortune .. Here we can draw the societal qualities of women, either a female has satisfied herself - will or the will of her guardian - to be a school in her home, her pleasure is only with her husband and her children, the woman in fact is a for the first school in which the human personality is formed, she chose the path of leadership carefully to reach her ambitious goals using her mind and talents. This model, which was talked about but the progress of societies and development, is measured only by the extent to which the woman reached ... It is from this mentality took these communities provisions on women, .. that, regardless of those exceptions that reached the women to the leadership, but Women, in general, remain in the gallery of the vulnerable, waiting for the man to take her hand, the society to empower them, and the power to issue laws that do justice to them, without being the main actors or those who play the pivotal role in accomplishing the achievements that keep pace with their knees. This, with the publication of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights most countries to its terms, there has become mandatory for the governments of these countries to accept women as a human being through compulsory education and partnership at work, a good role in its social, economic and cultural life, and to a lesser degree in political life. ..

Training is of great importance in the age in which we live. The technological and scientific development is fast so that we constantly need to learn new skills and sciences. There is no more recent or clearer example of the computer and its rapid developments so that we need to learn new in this area perhaps every week. See the evolution of administrative science and the impact of globalization on management concepts. In industry, we find that technological development makes us have to use advanced equipment and therefore need to be trained. But training is not only related to science, knowledge and modern techniques but training has other reasons. One of the most important of these reasons is the strengthening of our weaknesses or our employees who are less efficient in their work. The origin of these weaknesses may be poor education or the difference between education and work requirements or career change. Many of us when he begins his career discover that he is not aware of writing work reports or organizing meetings or labor laws nor methods of problem analysis. So there are a lot of weaknesses that we need to strengthen by training. You often see managers mocking the skills of new graduates and just talking about their weaknesses, which is not constructive and disrespectful. If we try to train them, we may find that they have great abilities and will do a lot of work and they will have a degree of loyalty to the institution that gave them training opportunities and also have a measure of appreciation to their managers who have been interested in developing their skills.
