

"If you want to succeed, you must love what you do." It is the first rule for success in your work..., but this does not mean that it is the only rule, but rather the opposite! The world of work is full of surprises, challenges and changes, a world that needs more than "love such" and requires a lot of time, effort and ... planning. If you are heading towards your career, and even if you are at its height, give yourself some time to think about your future, your work and what you want to achieve in the coming years in your field of specialization. I do not doubt that you want the "best" ... is the self-work by the person on himself in order to identify each of his weaknesses and strengths. The former works to find realistic solutions for it that are implemented in stages and steady steps. And, Plato has emphasized since ancient times the concept of self-development and considered that raising a person for himself is more important than raising parents or teachers because he knows his negatives and positives. In order to be able to develop yourself and raise your level, you must have a clear future vision that helps you in the development, by asking yourself some questions, which are: How do you see yourself in the months and years to come? What do you want to be in your next years? What are the goals that make you reach your dream? And when developing your future plan, it must be a more realistic future plan that is not exaggerated in order not to get frustrated and to feel despair if you do not achieve the aspirations and aspirations that you set. For the sake of self-development, you must define your path in any direction. Do you choose the field of education and obtain certificates in order to reach you to the highest ranks? Or do you read and read until your mind opens? Or do you take training courses to advance your level? Or do you reach the highest levels of self-development, which is the combination of these methods at the same time? All of these methods will lead you to the remarkable and visible development of your personality and life, although this will happen at different levels according to each method. The strong personality is the one that continues to grow and develop. The owner of the fossilized mindset is weak in character and whoever does not benefit from his time, health and potential will not achieve any development in his life and whoever does not alter his behavior and give up his mistakes will be considered dependent on society and not liked among people. You must have the ability to make the right choice, distinguish between good and evil, right and wrong, perceiving the present reality and anticipating the future. Growth and development are prerequisites for your personality to be strong and productive at the same time.

Omar Ismail Al Khoori

Omar_AI_Khoori@yahoo.com